Brief Intro: In Evolutionary Astrology, we look at certain placements in a person's natal chart (pictured above), which gives us a window to look through into their "soul." Obviously, there is a lot of complex information that [I don't think] could ever be entirely decoded; however, there are different processes that give a lot of insight into what soul-journey a person is on. One way to look at this is from a reincarnation standpoint wherein a person's soul incarnates into different lives to learn and master certain lessons. If the lessons aren't fully grasped, then the soul will come back to learn. This is the "true" interpretation of karma. For people who do not believe in reincarnation or past-lives (which is totally fine!), another way to look at this astrological process is to imagine being born with a spiritual composition that involves varying degrees of inherited traits and tendencies that are meant to be recognized, explored, and healed. We mostly look at the lunar South and North nodal placements, which informs us of who you may have been in your most recent past life or set of past lives. We can get an idea of what it may have felt like to be you. A lot of the themes will echo into your current lifetime. We can see what some of the challenges were (and likely are) along with the direction your soul is on. Also, when we look at the "past," it errs more on the negative/shadow side so that we can get more of an idea of what we are here to heal and correct.

YOUR "PAST" - WHO YOU HAVE BEEN:

Lunar South Node in Gemini 9th House

» Mercury in Pisces 6th House

In your most recent past life (or set of past lifetimes), you had a tremendous ability to think quickly. You spent your life, hungry for stimulation. You were quite a "chatty" person, who always had A LOT to say, whether through verbal communication or writing. You lived your life with a youthful spirit, which likely got you into some trouble. Because of your intellectual and, perhaps, impulsive nature, you may have found yourself caught up in a lot of unstable commitments. It was very possible that you spent a lot of your time going in a million directions, without ever fully developing a specific mission. Your energy was very scattered, which likely caused you to lose a sense of perspective. You may have been driven by the need to be an "expert" without the experience necessary to take on that role. Because of this conflict, you might have found yourself in situations where you had to use your wit and sharp-tongue to manipulate your way throughout the world.

The following are some possible ways that your past lives may have manifested:

- You might have been a world-traveler who spent so much time in so many places, that you ended up feeling like you "missed out" on life
- You might have spent time as a journalist who was expected to "have all the answers" and, therefore, had to use too much persuasion or dishonesty to relieve some of the social pressure
- You may have been a person who lived "under toxic orders," and therefore, had to escape the overwhelming duties. Escaping this toxic environment might have left you feeling somewhat culturally displaced.

- You might have been sold an illusion of a “better life” somewhere else, which may have actually got you caught up in more confusing and difficult situations
- You could have been a teacher with A TON of information, and yet, felt like you lacked the wisdom that you truly needed to feel meaningful

WHO YOU ARE BECOMING - YOUR “KARMIC MEDICINE”:

Lunar North Node in Sagittarius 3rd House

» Jupiter in Libra 12th House Conjunct Libra Ascendant

Saturn square Pluto

In this lifetime, you’re being called to turn your intelligence and “mental processes” into something meaningful and well-rounded. You’re being guided to refine your perception by adopting a philosophy for your life. Rather than absorbing endless amounts of information that seem to keep you spinning in circles; it’s important to develop a “system” by which you can live. Part of your divine mission is the “philosopher's quest.” This process will require you to have faith in yourself when the unexpected occurs. Because so much of your time is spent “in your head,” it’s very important for you to develop a committed practice where you can “detach” from your mental loops. Things like meditation will help you step outside of your stimulated world and clarify concise goals.

You are likely to experience a fear of “committing” to just one goal or aspiration. It may seem like you’ll “miss out” on something more interesting or stimulating if you hone your focus on ONE thing; however, this is part of your mission in this lifetime - to develop expertise in a specific area. So, this might require you to receive specialized or advanced training/education in something that feels meaningful to you. Otherwise, you’ll feel like a student of a million different things. If you are able to maintain focus and commitment to a field or area, it is quite possible that you will be invited to “stand at the podium” to teach the wisdom that you’ve diligently grown into. You might find, later in life, that you are great at motivational speaking and are revered as a wise elder whom others seek for guidance and knowledge. Tapping into your natural charismatic charm and diplomatic talents will allow you to find luck in whatever pursuits you may have.

It is very important for you to look at any insecurities which you may have because if you do not notice or heal these things, you might find yourself drawn toward relationships that are limiting. Finding an ideal partner is very important to you, and you will learn the most about yourself through your partner, so long as you are self-aware and introspective. The type of partner that will accelerate your growth will be a person who embraces your individuality and unique spirit. It’s important for them to inspire you to take beneficial action. If they are assertive and initiate positive actions, you will be motivated to do the same. Be careful not to get too caught up in your partner’s hopes and dreams that you sacrifice your own. You like harmony and dislike confrontation, but don’t allow yourself to get caught up in passive-aggression if your needs aren’t being met. This will cause you to feel resentful. Be sure to speak your truth because you might have a tendency to hold yourself back from shining in order to maintain a sense of emotional security.

You might experience tension related to what you feel like you have to do and what you want to do. Remind yourself of your resiliency so that you do not get stuck in or over-burdened in difficult situations that feel too hard to change. If you open yourself up to change and unpredictability, you'll recognize how strong you are able to handle anything that comes your way.
